

The Finest Home Remodeling Talent in Texas

Tyler Wood's Bio

Born in Fort Worth, Texas, Tyler Wood knew early on that he wanted to operate his own business. After a decade in the construction industry, he and business partner Jim McBride, opened J&J General Contracting.

Both Jim and Tyler knew their vision was greater than their original plan. Years in the field working with frustrated home owners and inconsistent suppliers, led Tyler to believe the market needed to offer more than another remodeling or construction company and Home Artisan Authority (HAA) was born.

Homeowners love his sense of humor and no-frills, direct communication style because expectations are clearer and the building process is more enjoyable. Complemented with Jim's attention to operational detail and introduction of technology and systems processes, HAA has set greater performance standards for the industry.

Tyler is married to Amy E. Wood; together they have a young daughter, Morgan. A 1998 graduate of the University of North Texas, Tyler is a board member of the Denton Main Street Association, a member of Leadership Denton and was Vice President on Theta Chi Fraternity Board of Directors. He loves Rugby, and is an active member of the Texas Association of Builders and Nation Home Builders Association.
